I agree with many who believe the proposed settlement doesn't address the crimes that the defendant has committed and will not discourage more of the same in the future.

The behavior of Microsoft has hurt, rather than helped, the computer industry.

The loss of a truly competitive marketplace will continue to impede progress.

This environment now threatens to be exported to more markets as Microsoft positions itself as the intermediary of all online transactions.

Now I read that Microsoft is offering to payoff the remaining states to join the settlement by offering to pay their legal fees. This is further proof to me that the DOJ has acquiesced to this corporation and is not upholding the law.
